

The wind blows

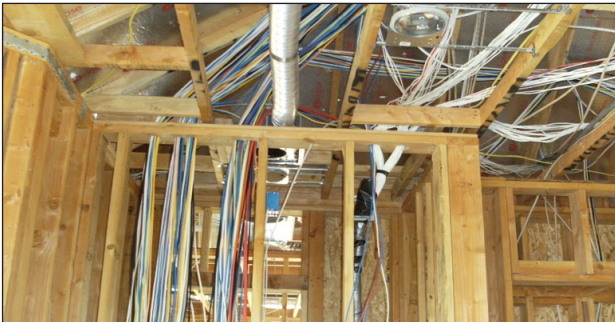

The energy of the wind pushes the blades of a turbine

The spinning turbine turns large magnets within a wire coil, generating electricity

Electricity is transmitted along power lines to homes and buildings

The electricity travels through cables in buildings to point of use

You plug your charger into a power point to charge your phone